Reflections on the Founding Fathers	34

IN JANUARY 2013, then International President Rick Barnes (TT 82) innocently asked, "Where is Daddy Doane buried?" A great fan of history and my own family's genealogical records, sheepishly I admitted I did not know. Consulting the archives on our Founder, while voluminous as to his life's achievements and accolades, few details were contained as to his final resting place. Thus began a great 32-month FarmHouse family history project to locate, visit and memorialize the monuments of our seven founding fathers an adventure spanning roads coast to coast and returning to our founding site.

As FarmHouse men we are keenly aware of and benefit from the great organization these seven men formed as young college students at the University of Missouri in 1905. But we are not as aware of the remarkable lives and achievements following. We thank those who responded to the call to offer your own personal antidotes and reflections from your interactions and encounters with these great men.

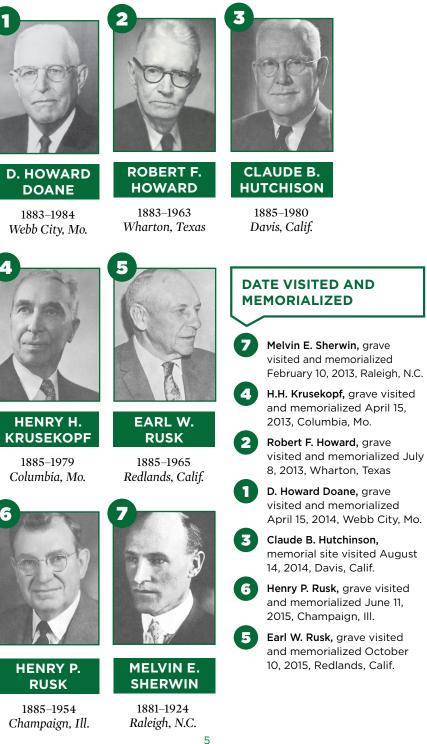

I thank the interest, research and assistance provided by many to locate these graves, in particular Tim Hadachek (KS 07) and Thomas Marten (SIU 11). And to the many FarmHouse men who joined me in this journey, including Hadachek and Marten, as well as Drew Goering (KS 07), Justin Crowley (MN 09), Dave Middleton (MO 71), Ray Schooley (KS 57), Shawn Eagleburger (IA 02), Darren Riskedal (IL 15), Dwight Raab (PU 80) and Darl Snyder (IA 42).

The result of this journey to rediscover our Founding Fathers of FarmHouse is shared now, for the interest and benefit of our membership. We hope this record of the Founders' final resting places might be a journey that you too follow someday, so as to pay your respects, to say thank you and to offer reverence to our founding seven along the FarmHouse monument road.

OVERVIEW OF THE FARMHOUSE FOUNDERS' MONUMENTS

From Davis, Calif. to Raleigh, N.C., the monument road stretches from the west coast to the east coast of the United States of America. The numbers on the above map correspond with the numbers on the key to the right.

D. HOWARD DOANE

1883–1984 Webb City, Mo.

D.HOWARD "DADDY" DOANE (1883–1984) was a true Renaissance man—a student, a teacher, a writer, a business man, a poet, a farmer, a public servant, a devout Christian. Most widely known as the founder and long-time chairman of the board of Doane Agricultural Services, which is the oldest and for decades was the largest farm management, appraisal and agricultural research organization in the United States. Among his many life accomplishments, Doane served on an agriculture task force appointed by President Herbert Hoover that was charged with reorganizing the U.S. Department of Agriculture. He wrote four books and numerous articles for the leading agricultural journals and magazines. He provided leadership to dozens of civic and professional organizations throughout his lifetime. He received a bachelor's in agriculture in 1908 and master's in agriculture in 1909 at the University of Missouri. He received three honorary doctorates as well.

REFLECTIONS ON THE FARMHOUSE FOUNDING FATHERS

IN RESEARCHING the final resting places of our founding seven, we asked and you answered the call to share your memories and reflections on the Founding Fathers. Shared here are some of the special and unique memories of these great men in our brothers own words...

DURING MY TENURE leading the Fraternity, I considered it a great honor to meet and correspond with five of the seven founders - Doane, Krusekopf, Howard, Hutchison and E. Rusk. None gave much direct advice on how the Fraternity should operate, but all were proud of the growth and the achievements of FarmHouse some 50+ years after its founding. Doane was the front man, and rightly so as it was evident many years later, he was still the leader of the group. Krusey (Krusekopf) was a gentleman and intellectual who I admired greatly for his work associated with the Indian Claims Commission. He remained modest and down to earth. while being an authority on so many topics as a researcher and agronomist. Hutchison was a very proper man who was widely admired in higher education and public service circles. I did not meet Howard in-person, but did correspond with him and later his wife after his passing. Lastly, I met "Farmer" Rusk on a few occasions, first at the Minneapolis Conclave in 1960 where he addressed the delegates. He was a go-getter, a character and had a rough and ready type personality. He was proud to be a farmer and you knew it.

Darl Snyder (IA 42), Master Builder

Pomona, Calif.

Snyder served as the Fraternity's part-time executive secretary and then first full-time executive director from 1959–69.

IN JULY OF 1961, I met Mr. Doane at a beef cattle improvement seminar at Colorado State University. We were staying in one of the university dorms on the west edge of the campus and as several of us gathered in the lobby early morning I asked if anyone would like to walk to the Union for breakfast and the meeting (as most would be driving). Mr. Doane was the only one who responded 'I sure would,' and we had a delightful visit enroute. I was impressed, both with the constructive nature of our conversation and the fact that he, one of the older persons in the group, was ready and eager to walk.

Duane Acker (IA 49), Master Builder

Atlantic, Iowa

WHILE I NEVER HAD A CHANCE TO MEET D. Howard Doane, I did have the privilege and honor of being President/ CEO of the company he founded in 1920. Doane Agricultural Services, in St. Louis, Mo. Mr. Doane pioneered several new services for the agricultural industry that continue today.

Its original business was providing management services for landowners who did not operate their own farms/ranches. A first in agricultural business.

To keep the company's farm managers informed, Mr. Doane began sending them a monthly newsletter with crop and livestock management tips, recent land sale prices, rental rates and other valuable information. It's frequency was increased from monthly to weekly. Others also wanted the information, so the Doane Agricultural Report newsletter was launched as a commercial enterprise. The newsletter was expanded to include commodity price forecasts and marketing recommendations—another first in the business.

In the 1960s, agri-marketers wanted to know more about farmers/ranchers' purchases and activities. Doane began sending a survey to its renters and the first agricultural market research firm was born.

Following his retirement, the company was split into three divisions and sold. The owner of what was Doane Farm Management is Farmers National Co., Omaha, Neb. Vance Publishing, Lincolnshire, III., now owns what was Doane Information Services. And Doane Marketing Research is now owned by the multinational research firm GfK.

When I joined the company in 1991, there were several employees who worked at the firm while Mr. Doane was still actively managing it. They told me he was a quiet and very thoughtful man who was a wonderful employer. He treated his employees well, earning their trust and respect.

The opportunity to run the company Mr. Doane founded became available and I jumped at the chance. I thought it only fitting that a FarmHouse man manage the company the Founder of our fraternity started, still bearing his name.

I was with Doane Agricultural Services as President/CEO until 2005. At that time, I formed Henderson Communications and purchased Agri Marketing magazine and its related media from Doane. So, one of Mr. Doane's legacies, FarmHouse Fraternity, helped me start my career and my own business ventures are connected to another of his legacies. For that, my family and I are forever grateful!

Lynn Henderson (IA 74)

Des Moines, Iowa

DADDY DOANE visited the Mizzou Chapter House during my freshman year in 1977. I had him sign my pledge paddle right at the top. I still have the paddle bearing his signature, which I consider a great point of FarmHouse pride!

Tim I. Ewing (MO 78) Fordland, Mo. I INTERVIEWED D. Howard Doane while attending the Conclave held at Estes Park, Colorado, as an undergraduate member at Michigan State in 1962. I purchased an inexpensive portable reel-to-reel tape recorder on which I recorded some of that dialogue. It was a privilege to attend Conclave, riding from Chicago on the Denver Zephyr. I had never seen mountains! When I had pictured 'Daddy' Doane in my mind's eye ahead of that event I had imagined him to be a strikingly forceful statesman. The person I met and listened to while he was at the Conclave was the 'father' that his nickname implied and immediately, a person that I knew cared about the future and those that could provide the leadership needed in agriculture and society.

Jim Gibson (MI 62)

Mankato, Minn.

IN 1973, soon after I earned the title, Accredited Farm Manager(AFM), from the American Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers, I received a handwritten letter, which I still have, from D. Howard Doane. It was a personal congratulatory note on the accreditation and he noted we shared the same initials.. Having founded ASFMRA, Doane was proud of all who achieved this credential and I was struck by the personal approach he took in welcoming those to the craft.

D. Howard Doster (OH 53)

Waynesville, Ohio

I RECALL BOTH KRUSEY AND DADDY DOANE attending many functions at the Missouri Chapter over the years. Their personalities were quite different, as Krusey often served as the role of social chair and wanted to spend time talking with brothers and enjoying fellowship, while Doane was the leader and task master, always ready to get to work! I recall the combination being a good reflection of what FarmHouse is to so many—fellowship, friendship, leadership and action.

Dave Middleton (MO 71)
